

Startseite > Kirche > Bekanntmachungen > Personnel change in NACI project management

From left: Bishop Jürg Zbinden and Priest Stefan Möckli (photo: NACI)

Zurich. Stefan Möckli (42) is the name of the new project manager of the New Apostolic Church International. The qualified management expert is taking over this position from Jürg Zbinden, who was ordained a Bishop in November of last year and now works in the New Apostolic Church Switzerland. There he will take over the secretariat of the District Apostle as of February.

Stefan Möckli lived in Argentina for over two years. Together with his wife Beatrice he managed a tourism enterprise in the Argentine province of Salta. After his return to Switzerland he took over the management of a wholesale company in Switzerland. The new project manager, who is also a Priest and youth leader in the New Apostolic congregation of Roggwil (canton of Bern), speaks four languages.

As future NACI project manager he will coordinate and organise discussions within the various Project Groups of the Church.

8 January 2008