NAC Lithuania introduces itself on the internet

Klaipeda. As of today the New Apostolic Church in Lithuania has its own internet presence. Visitors are led through the website in three languages, namely Lithuanian, Russian, and English. There is also a contact address available for visitors in search of further information.

On the homepage, visitors are greeted by an eye-catching interactive map of Lithuania subdivided into various geographic regions. Clicking on the various regions provides instant access to the church districts within each. This Baltic country is home to some 5,600 New Apostolic members in 35 congregations, who are served by around 80 ministers.

It is an interesting fact that the first congregations of the New Apostolic Church in Lithuania were already established before the First World War. Events in the country's contemporary history made it necessary for the Church to re-register the congregations in Lithuania in 1991/92.

We extend a warm welcome to our new website in Lithuania: www.lnab.lt
